

ASHVILLE AGGREGATES PRIVACY POLICY

Here at Ashville, we strive to be transparent and clear with all of our operations and we do so by being open with our privacy policy. We appreciate the importance of your privacy and your desire to be aware of what information we store and how this information is used going forward. According to the EU Data Protection Regulation (Article 13 GDPR) we are obliged to inform you about the purpose for which we collect, store or disclose data and the rights that you have regarding data protection.

This privacy policy relates to information given through our websites contact form and other forms of communication such as our dedicated booking hotline. The information that we store is only maintained for our company records and it is our promise to only contact our clients with information useful or important to you.

We do not share any of your personal information with third parties or other companies. All of your information is stored in secure and encrypted database. Depending on the information in which you choose to submit on our site, it is possible that we may store some or all of the following information:

- Name
- Company/Business Name
- Email Address
- Telephone Number
- Address (for delivery and invoicing purposes)
- How You Heard About Us

Occasionally, we may update or change some of our terms and conditions. If we do this, you will be contacted with any relevant information that you may need to be aware of as these updates are implemented. These changes will be sent as part of our newsletters, which you also have the opportunity to unsubscribe from at any point if you so desire.

On our website, we do display buttons linking to our social media services including Twitter, Instagram and Facebook. Any use of connecting with us using these third party sites are entirely optional. We're not responsible for the practices or the privacy policies of these sites and you are responsible for reading, understanding and adhering to these sites policies.

If you have any questions or queries about our privacy policy or some of the other services we provide, we have a team of dedicated staff that you can reach by calling 020 7736 0355 or by using our online contact form.
